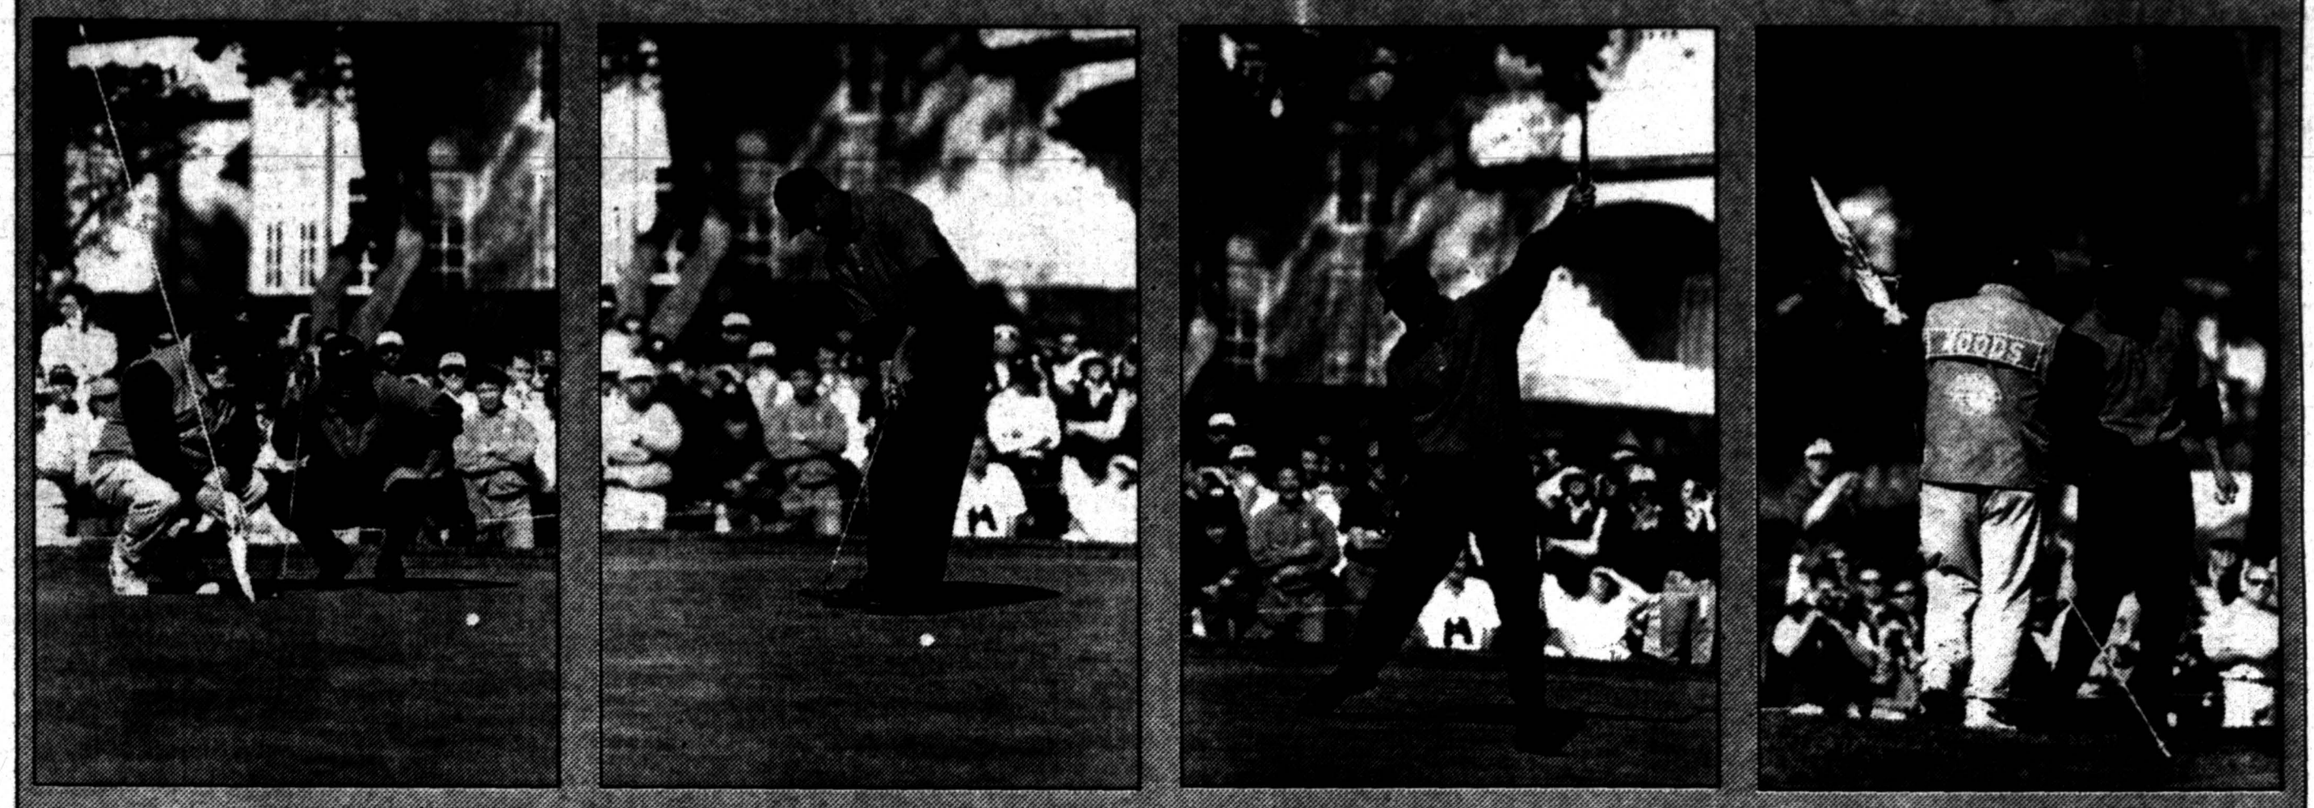
AT&T Aftermath: Tiger tames Pebble, but O'Meara prevails



PHOTOS/COLE THOMPSON

On the 12th hole at Pebble Beach during Sunday's fourth and final round, the irrepressible Tiger Woods sinks a birdie putt en route to a round of 64, which left him just one stroke shy of winner Mark O'Meara, who shot four consecutive 67s in capturing his fifth title here. Who needs fair weather friends?

A LOCAL publication floated a trial balloon early last week urging that the AT&T golf extravaganza — nee "The Crosby" — be played in SUMMER instead of late-January-early February!

Joe Fitzpatrick

Or, failing that, it suggested the tournament be played in summer in ALTERNATE years.

IN support of the idea, the publication quoted one local fellow who said, "Why should the tournament be held smack in the middle of our rainy season every year?"

He said he had talked to a former PGA circuit pro who thought it was a good idea that it be played in summer.

TO ANSWER the first fella's question, let us count the whys:

1 — When Bing Crosby brought his tournament (he called it a clambake) here from Southern California in 1947, it was at the suggestion of the late Ted Durein who foresaw it as a boon to the Monterey Peninsula economy during the barren days of winter when tourism hibernated.

IT has proven to be just such a boon, and to move it to summer would be pure economic insanity. Retailers, hotels, restaurants, etc., do very well in summer without it. They would be near-comatose in WINTER without it.

2 — The AT&T has achieved world renown BECAUSE of the

With lingering financial questions, council OKs Sunset Center plan

By PAUL WOLF

AS THE Carmel City Council moves forward to pursue a massive redevelopment of the Sunset Center Theater, a batch of financial questions will need to be answered in the months to come.

Is there money to pay for more parking for a busier complex? Would local voters be willing to shoulder the burden of a new tax if that became necessary? Can ongoing operational costs be kept at current levels?

These questions aside, the Carmel City Council voted 5-0 Tuesday afternoon to follow the guide of "vision instead of nostalgia."

High spirits overrode worries about financial uncertainties to come. The council's action was greeted by protracted applause and a standing ovation — something that doesn't occur every month.

For now, the council spoke with one voice in its decision to pursue the $12.9 million "BOOR/A" plan, which includes a fully rebuilt theater. The council decided not to pursue the "historic preservation model," which would have avoided the demolition of the beloved former Sunset School building in the interest of preserving history and memories.

That plan — which appeared to be gaining some momentum in recent days among assorted residents and a minority of the performing arts crowd — would have been

Absolute Power

Last weekend, Clint Eastwood was playing golf at the AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am. Tonight, he will be the star attraction at the world premiere of his new movie, Absolute Power, in a benefit for the Carmel Youth Center. Eastwood, shown here wearing an Absolute Power hat, will join other celebrities at the sold-out event, which is scheduled to begin at 5:30 p.m. at Galaxy Six Cinemas, Del Monte Shopping Center. A screening of the movie follows the reception, with dessert being served afterward.

At mid-year, Carmel budget robust, but caution does prevail

By PAUL WOLF

A STRONG economy and conservative budgeting practices have paid off in a big way for Carmel city officials, who report that the books are comfortably in the black and reserve accounts have reached their highest levels.

City officials disclosed a number of favorable budget reports this week with the conclusion of the mid-fiscal year budget review.

Chief among them was the announcement that, for the first time in the city's history, there is maximum funding (a total of $5.3 million) in the dozen or so reserve accounts.

These accounts are the financial buffers the city maintains in the event of lawsuits, employee compensation claims, environmental disasters and economic recessions.

Some reserve accounts, such as worker's compensation and liability insurance, are designed for specific kinds of emergencies. Others are general in nature, such as the "revenue buffer" — available cash that lies waiting in case the city council overestimates revenues at the start of its budget cycle.

At present, the city has its largest-ever revenue buffer of $425,000.

This week, the Carmel City Council stowed away another $106,000 into reserve accounts. In so doing, it finally satisfied

MEASURE A

When yes means no: Dam is a major part of picture

By PAUL WOLF

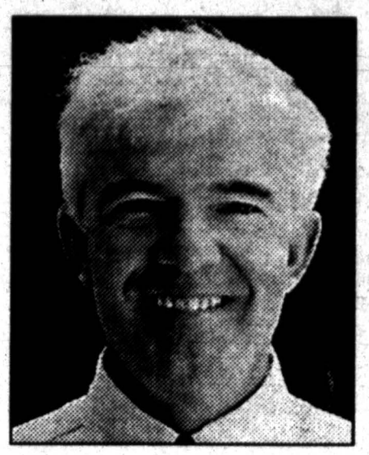
FOR ALL the confusion caused by that mind-numbing piece of legislation known as Measure A, a certain light of clarity shines on the complex subject:

Those who like Measure A hate the dam proposal, and those who like the dam proposal hate Measure A.

At the seven-member Monterey Peninsula Water Management District board, battle lines have been drawn in a similar fashion. Behind the Measure A debate is the old and new controversy surrounding what used to be called the New Los Padres Dam but has now been modified and dubbed the "No-Growth Carmel River Dam."

No formal position has been taken (see related story), but the water board has lined up as follows:

Against Measure A and still supportive of the dam are Chairman Dick Ely, Darlene Burkleo, Jim Hughes, Bob Ernst and David Pendergrass. Supportive of Measure A and still opposing the dam are Dave Potter (who opposed the dam before he joined the water board in January) and Lou Haddad.



Richard Ely . . .
. . . Measure A opponent

Janice O'Brien . . .
. . . Measure A proponent

While Measure A is not supposed to be "the second referendum" on the dam, it would be foolhearty to overlook the significance of this familiar division on the board.

Moreover, in the community at large, there is a similar split. Many of the same foes of the dam are leading Measure A's cause.

While the dam was rejected by voters in November 1995, the debate about the project lives on. After all, Measure A — the MPWMD mail ballot that will be tabulated starting March 4 — would prevent the district from turning over the dam permits to the California-American Water Co. (Cal-Am).

"If you are for the dam, you certainly should not be for Measure A," summed up Haddad.

Many provisions

The Preserve Our Water Resources (POWR) legislation also would prevent the water district from passing out new water allocations to the cities, Carmel among them, while the ongoing water shortage was at hand.

And that is not all. A suc-

From nasty weather to an undeserved rip on Tiger

Peninsula's capricious weather at this time of year, not despite it. Remember the year it snowed (1962)? It was chronicled in print and pictures around the globe!

And another bonus — when the AT&T weather is GOOD, that, too, is big news!

Without the whimsical Peninsula weather gods, the AT&T would be just another humdrum golf tournament, on another pretty course, in boringly perfect weather — all of which sends TV viewers every weekend scurrying to their remotes, if not to their Sealy Posturepedics!

Joe Fitzpatrick

3 — GOLF suffers enough from an undeserved, wimpy image without giving its detractors more ammunition by running for cover because of a little weather!

What next? Would it take the British Open away from those blustery courses over there and play it in Florida? Zzzzz.

AND as long as we're allergic to zephyrs and sprinkles, can ARENA golf on Astro-Turf be far behind?

4 — There are no open dates in the pro golf circuit, so which summer golf site could the AT&T trade dates with? The Greater Milwaukee Open? The Buick Open? How deep are the snows in Wisconsin and Michigan around Feb. 1?

THAT'S enough. Because it's often windy, sometimes showery, occasionally foggy, but always mixed with sunshine, the AT&T is far more challenging for golfers and more interesting for spectators than any other tournament you can name.

The defense rests.

TODAY'S QUOTE . . . Bing Crosby:

"Fans around the country know about our weather, and they seem to take a sadistic pleasure in seeing pros, actors and other notables make fools of themselves."

THESE FOOLISH THINGS . . . Cute, 20ish ding-a-ling in monstrous gallery Saturday at Pebble Beach — "Kevin Costner is, like, heaven on meringue, but who's the juicy dude with him?" (Tiger Woods was who.) . . . Mortified 20ish male with her — "Shh! Don't let anybody hear you. I'll fill you in later." (Heaven on meringue? Juicy dude? Is that the language of love today?)

Over-dressed fellow (suit, tie, black shoes), nursing a cocktail and watching the tournament unfold on a TV set in the Tap Room, to his female companion — "It just doesn't get any better than this, does it?" At that moment, a woman in the crowded room bumped his elbow, causing him to spill his cocktail down the front of his suit and tie. Replied his female companion with immaculate timing — "Nope."

SPEAKING OF TIGER . . . How about the new kid on The Bland block who ripped Tiger Woods with the strangest logic since Emperor Norton tried to explain that water really runs uphill, not down!

Tiger Woods may have missed this eagle putt on the 18th hole at Pebble Beach during Sunday's fourth round of the AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am, but, contrary to the opinions of a columnist in Monday's edition of the daily, he emerged as anything but a loser.

Tiger "deserved to lose," wrote The Kid, lightning flashing around his head, because his playing partner was Kevin Costner!

Huh? Well, see, The Kid explained, Costner is a dirty, rotten, Hollywood rackafritz who abandoned his family for the life of a playboy, and so Tiger deserved to lose the tournament!

Hitchhiker in middle of road offers a reason

HERE'S A look at the more significant items of activity logged by the Monterey County Sheriff's Department from Tuesday, Jan. 28 through Saturday, Feb. 1.

"Carmel" entries do not include calls from within the city limits of Carmel-by-the-Sea, which is under the jurisdiction of the Carmel Police Department.

TUESDAY, JAN. 28

Big Sur: A 42-year-old man found hitchhiking in the middle of the road told deputies that he didn't want to hurt himself, he only wanted a ride to a shelter or a transportation center. Deputies gave the man a ride to the Greyhound station.

Carmel: A 25-year-old man reported the theft of his television from his residence. Access to the residence was gained through an unlocked back door.

Carmel Valley: Nothing suspicious was found after deputies responded to an anonymous report of a person running down El Portrero Road.

Carmel: A 50-year-old man who had been renting a house for the duration of the AT&T tournament reported returning home to find the rear sliding-glass door open. Nothing appeared missing or disturbed.

Big Sur: A woman reported being the victim of a sexual assualt. She did not wish to press charges.

WEDNESDAY, JAN. 29

Carmel: Two juveniles were cited and released after they were found smoking in a parked vehicle.

Carmel: A high school counselor reported that a 15-year-old male student told him that the student's parents would not allow him to return home. Deputies convinced the juvenile's mother to let her son return home and "work matters out."

Carmel: A shopping center maintenance worker reported seeing a man peer into a vacant automobile. The man made no attempt to enter the vehicle.

Pebble Beach: Deputies on a welfare check found a 79-year-old woman lying on the floor of her residence. She was transported to Community Hospital for treatment.

Carmel: A 54-year-old man was arrested and transported to jail after punching his girlfriend in the stomach, grabbing her around the neck and then beating her head against the wall. The incident occurred after the victim called her assailant an obscene word during an argument.

THURSDAY, JAN. 30

Carmel: A juvenile was given a citation after he had been observed looking into vehicles and pulling on the door handle of one vehicle.

Carmel: Deputies arrested an intoxicated woman who left a bookstore without paying for several books she had hidden in her shopping bags. It was later discovered that the price tags had been torn off the filched books.

Carmel Valley: Animal control was notified after deputies received a report that an 8-year-old boy had been bitten on the face by a neighbor's dog. The victim was transported to Community Hospital for treatment.

Carmel: A 15-year-old male was cited and released to his mother after he was observed chucking marijuana and a pipe into a clump of bushes. He was also found to be in possession of a dirk (dagger).

FRIDAY, JAN. 31

Pebble Beach: Two missing divers were found and recovered by a U.S. Coast Guard patrol boat.

Carmel Valley: A man reported the theft of a car cover and a snow plow.

Carmel Valley: A woman reported the theft of her wedding ring from the bathroom in her residence.

Pebble Beach: An intoxicated 22-year-old man was arrested after he was found at the 16th hole yelling at contestants during the AT&T Pro-Am.

SATURDAY, FEB. 1

Big Sur: State park rangers requested assistance in reaching a man who had barricaded himself inside a trailer. The man had earlier assaulted one person and attacked park rangers with an axe. After forcing entry into the trailer, Sheriff's Department members transported the man to Community Hospital for treatment of injuries he sustained during the entry.

Carmel: A woman reported that someone had cut down a wire fence bordering a private beach.

Carmel Valley: A woman reported that $140 was removed from her vehicle parked in her driveway. She suspects a friend to whom she lent her car is responsible for the theft.

Carmel Valley: A man reported the theft of his dog.

Carmel: A 48-year-old woman wished to prosecute after she reported that a 28-year-old man pushed her twice during the course of an argument.

Carmel: Deputies found an intoxicated woman walking northbound on Highway 1. The woman resisted arrest and deputies reporting using "slight" force to restrain her.

Carmel Valley: A golf course maintenance worker reported startling a burglar who fled the premises, leaving behind a pry bar, screwdriver, flashlight and hand drill. The supposed mode of operation — knocking a hole in the wall to gain access to the pro shop office where the safe is located — is the same that had been used during recent burglary attempts at two other golf courses.

The Monterey County 'Sheriff's Log' appears weekly in The Pine Cone.

Carmel River Bridge park honors Mission Fields' recovery

By PAUL WOLF

ON ITS most superficial level, it is merely a stone, a massive vestige of a fallen structure — the old Carmel River Bridge.

But if the big rock was of enormous symbolic significance, it is this week of even more import. It symbolizes the community's recovery — speedy recovery — from the floods of 1995.

On Monday, the slab of concrete — an end-piece of the old bridge — became the centerpiece for a mini-park on the north side of the new bridge.

Carmel Mayor Ken White, after being introduced by retired 5th District Monterey County Supervisor Sam Karas, dedicated the stone and unveiled a plaque with some simple language honoring individuals who helped inspire the fast installation of a new structure, which followed the bridge's washout on March 10, 1995 — the second flood in two months.

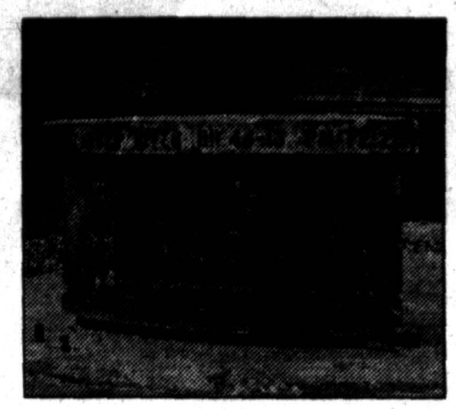
Clint Eastwood was honored Monday for serving as a key liaision with Gov. Pete Wilson.

Hard to forget

After the ceremony, one Mission Fields resident may have hit the nail on the head when, trying to be realistic rather than ungracious, he said that residents of his Carmel neighborhood will be able to "remember the floods (of 1995) with or without a memorial."

That comment may be true enough, but the massive concrete rock was dedicated not merely as a monument to the 200 or so Mission Fields households that were twice flooded. It was intended to recognize key figures who lobbied Gov. Pete Wilson on behalf of the decision to fast-track the building of the new bridge.



Unbelievably, this big rock had been stolen but later mysteriously returned.

The new bridge, which many believed would be a year in coming, was finished 54 days after the old one was destroyed. The speed with which the project was completed helped businesses, particularly those in Big Sur, survive greatly decreased foot traffic, visitors and customers.

The plaque mentions by name Peninsula businessmen Ted Balestreri and Clay Larson, as well as former Carmel mayor Clint Eastwood, who used his influence to arrange for a meeting with the governor.

In addition, the plaque honors the landscape designer for the new park, Carmel's Gary Girard,

MEASURE A: Ballots being mailed

cessful yes on A campaign would obligate the water district to take any new water supply proposals to the people if their cost would exceed $1 million.

Even though the legislation has many goals, the dam is the consistent backdrop,

'I do think it is a mistake to assess POWR only as it relates to the dam. The legislation would handicap the water district in many ways, whether or not the dam is built.'

— Ed Lee

whether or not some people would like to say so.

Measure A supporter Ed Lee, who campaigned against the dam, said there is "clear overlap" between the dam issue and the POWR issue.

"I do think it is a mistake to assess POWR only as it relates to the dam," said Lee, a former MPWMD director. "The legislation would handicap the water district in many ways, whether or not the dam is built."

Measure A advocate Janice O'Brien similarly, but for different reasons, hoped to separate the dam issue from the proposed legislation.

"We are not telling the water district what to do (for projects like the dam)," she said. "We just don't want the district to continue to deplete our water resources."

Supporters of the legislation say the provision to block the transfer of the dam permits is a means of keeping the water board

'We are not telling the water district what to do. We just don't want the district to continue to deplete our water resources.'

— Janice O'Brien

accountable to the public will, as expressed in 1995 when 57 percent of voters rejected the dam.

"We feel the people should have a voice," O'Brien said. "It wouldn't seem kosher for the water district to throw out our vote."

Two sides

Supporters of the legislation generally argue that the Peninsula can solve its water problems without a dam and with a combination of small projects, such as a new desalination plant, more wells, conservation, transfer of underground water.

Opponents of Measure A, however, maintain that such a collection of projects would be too expensive and cumbersome to put in place.

Those who oppose Measure A defend the dam as the only means of making up the area's water deficit, as outlined in a 1995 State Water Resources Control Board ruling.

Opponents, such as water director Ely, argue it would be impossible for the community to go to the voters several times to approve every million-dollar project that comes along.

"Measure A goes too far and is in the worst interest of the people," Ely said.

Many opponents of Measure A are less shy about making the direct connection with the dam debate.

"The backdrop of Measure A has to be the dam because there are simply no alternatives to the dam to make up for the 10,730 acre-feet the state said we have to make up for," said Bob McKenzie of the No on A committee.

McKenzie and others see mandatory rationing as the inevitable consequence of Measure A's approval. The way out of rationing is for the community to support some sort of a dam, even if it is not exactly of the make and model as the $116 million version rejected by the electorate 15 months ago, according to Measure A oponents.

Cal-Am's dam — the same project as the New Los Padres Dam but without the growth allotment — is the best solution now on the table, according to many Measure A opponents.

As Peninsula residents can expect to receive their mail ballots this weekend, one thing is clear: If Measure A isn't all about the dam, that resilient project is a major part of the picture.

Water board expected to take position on measure next week

By PAUL WOLF

THE PENINSULA water board is scheduled next week to consider taking a position on the controversial POWR initiative, the subject of a mail ballot in the form of Measure A.

The seven-member board of directors of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District is slated to meet at 7 p.m., Thursday, Feb. 13 at the Monterey City Council Chambers off Pacific Street in Monterey.

The board will receive a final report from the MPWMD staff on the impacts of Measure A, both with and without its passage.

In addition, directors will consider taking a stand on the measure. "I feel strongly that the board should take a position," said Chairman Dick Ely, a vocal opponent of Measure A.

Criticized for dam stance

A year-and-a-half ago, many people within the MPWMD boundaries criticized the board for taking a stand on the proposed New Los Padres Dam, which voters rejected in November 1995.

But an item of even greater controversy was the water district's decision to distribute information about that project after it was on record as supporting it. At the time, the district defended its informational mailers as objective, legal and proper.

Opponents of the dam viewed the mailers as biased.

As it stands, the district has no intention of issuing mailers. However, copies of the staff's impartial analysis and the board's resolution from Feb. 13 — if it chooses to adopt one — will be made available to citizens upon request, according to Henrietta Stern, a MPWMD senior planner and public information officer.

Final versions of the report on the impacts of Measure A will be available starting Friday.

The results of Measure A will be tabulated on March 4. The cost of the mail ballot to the district will be roughly $70,000.

No conflict of interest

MPWMD legal counsel David Laredo confirmed that there is no conflict of interest for the board to take a stand on Measure A.

Ely, who was not on the board in 1995, said there was more potential for conflict of interest when the dam ballot measure was in the works because that project included "the authorization of public funds" for planned construction.

Some 61,000 Monterey Peninsula voters will receive their mail ballots this weekend. Those who have not received their ballots by Tuesday should call the Monterey County Elections Department.

SHORING UP POLICIES

Carmel Mayor Ken White is in the process of forming a task force that will look at beach maintenance and operations as a whole, rather than as a number of unrelated policies.

Mayor convenes task force to create Beach Master Plan

By PAUL WOLF

CARMEL BEACH — that mile-long stretch of white sand, adored at home and famous worldwide — once again has become the focus of attention among city policy makers.

Mayor Ken White has selected Jean Grace (mayor from 1988 to 1992) as the chair of an 11-member Beach Task Force that will help the city council create policies for the beach, Scenic Road and nearby areas.

"We need to set policies that help the city manage the beach for decades to come," White told The Pine Cone this week.

The task force would be charged with creating a Carmel Beach Master Plan, which would be an expansion and elaboration on the current Carmel Beach Management Plan.

The management plan is more of a guide for week-to-week operations. The master plan, on the other hand, would spell out general policies and conform with Carmel's Local Coastal Plan, which has yet to be finalized.

A date for the task force's first meeting has not been set, according to White. The mayor also said it is premature to release the names of those who have been offered a spot on the task force.

"The task force will be composed of ordinary citizens from every part of Carmel," White said, noting that the members will not come from other commissions and committees.

Key topics

Key issues to be studied by the group include:

■ Restroom facilities.

Controversy was stirred last year when the city installed a temporary port-a-potty at Scenic Road and Santa Lucia.

FITZPATRICK: Herb was pure gold

(Guilt by association is IN again? Sen. Joe McCarthy lives?)

THE KID tied it all up into a neat little bundle with this ultimatum:

"He (Tiger) has to make a choice when it comes to the AT&T. Play serious golf or hang out on Planet Hollywood."

(That wasn't "serious golf" Tiger was playing?)

"HE can't have it both ways," The Kid thundered on, "and if he chooses the latter, then he deserves to lose."

Swell. Just what we need — a brand new kid who has appointed himself chief of the morals police!

LET'S SEE, so far The Kid has told the 49ers to deal Steve Young, and has charged Tiger Woods with guilt by association.

Off to such a propitious start, will his next epic perhaps be, "Amelia Earhart Should Have Stayed In the Kitchen Where She Belonged"?

WE can only wait with breath appropriately bated. Meanwhile, the Peninsula apologizes to the incredible Tiger Woods.

A FAREWELL . . . The great Herb Caen died last Saturday, and by now he has looked around inside the Pearly Gates and said to the folks there:

"It ain't bad, but it ain't San Francisco."

AT a gigantic tribute-party thrown for him by a grateful and adoring City of San Francisco last June, Herb declared that's what he'd say if he ever got to heaven.

And if Herb Caen doesn't get there, who does?

THIS was a colossus who had been both the daily historian and patron-saint-in-residence of San Francisco for 59 years. He was equally at ease in a gathering of stevedores or industrial barons, cops or femmes de pave, ballplayers or opera singers, political heavies or the homeless.

A close friend of Cronkite, Sinatra, Robin Williams, Kennedys, Browns, Carol Doda, down-and-outers, etc., his daily column was as indispensable a ritual as morning coffee to San Franciscans — and to thousands of other northern and central Californians, as well.

AT one time, I had an editor who snarled, "Herb Caen could never write for any paper that I was in charge of!"

It was an incredible self-indictment, for Herb was pursued by far-superior editors in New York and Los Angeles during his grand career — but always chose to remain in San Francisco instead.

CAEN had the rare ability to bring one to tears, to laughter or to cheers in the fewest words of anyone I've ever read. And his descriptive prose was right there with Hemingway's. Try this musing from 20 years ago:

"It's true that some of the great bars have gone ... El Prado was one of the good ones — women in flowered hats over silver foxtails, showing much leg, tooth and zeal.

"MILLIONAIRE George Lewis, silver champagne bucket at left elbow, ravishing keptive at right, presiding over his sycophantic circle at the old Templebar ...

"STILL, it's hard to find a bad bar in San Francisco, where there is so much to drink to and think on, where a man can sit alone, staring at himself in the mirror, discounting the evidence as unreliable and say to himself that tonight may be the night ...

"Women don't understand men and bars."

HERB was a gentleman in the finest sense — forthright, erudite, courageous as hell, compassionate, and with a jack-in-the-box wit that could pop up in his writings (and in person) at the most delicious times!

He was a treasured friend and one of only a precious few I could say this about:

Herb Caen was pure gold. A lot of us are poorer today.

BEACH

Concerned about aesthetics, the city screened the temporary restroom with a wooden fence.

Many in town argued that a bathroom, whether a temporary facility or a permanent one, has been desperately needed. Others, particularly those who live on the street, argued the temporary facility was inappropriate and possibly posed health hazards.

"I am personally convinced that some kind of bathroom is needed there," Grace said.

Grace said the key questions are: What kind of bathroom? Is a wash basin needed? Should it be inside or outside the facility? What about sewage for a permanent bathroom?"

■ Erosion management.

At present, erosion problems are not as bad as they were more than a decade ago, when major bluff rehabilitation was undertaken to prevent Scenic from literally collapsing into the sand.

Before she became mayor, Grace was instrumental in studying the erosion problems and leading the planning effort to create the permanent beach walkway, installed in the mid-1980s with major grants from the Coastal Conservancy.

The storms of early 1995 and more bad weather this year have created new erosion problems. Today, one can survey the erosion through casual observation, but there is no immediate danger presented, according to White.

The master plan would not address the question of how to pay for maintenance and improvements. That would be an item to be addressed as part of the annual budget review.

■ Access and use.

Under this heading are a variety of issues, everything from curfews and campfires to dog walking. Many of these topics currently are covered in ordinances.

■ Landscaping.

The master plan would spell out a variety of policies for beautification, according to White.

Venerable theater to be transformed

■ Carmel Village Theater on Dolores to become retail, apartments

By JERRY STEWART

THE BUILDING that formerly housed the Carmel Village Theater, located between Seventh and Dolores, will soon be filled with retail shops and residential tenants instead of movie goers.

According to Rick Tooker, senior planner for the Carmel Planning Department, the theater space will undergo a facelift that will change the bottom floor into retail space and the upper loft into three studios.

"We will be extending the floor of the upper loft in order to convert that space for residential purposes, and the bottom will be used for retail shops," Tooker said.

The Carmel Planning Commission has already reviewed and approved the use permit, Tooker said.

And the city council does not have to approve the project.

The theater building, previously owned by John Mandurrago, of Mandurrago, Mandurrago and Sullivan Designers of Carmel, was sold about six months ago to a buyer who will reside in the building when the project is completed.

Mandurrago, who along with his partners will be in charge of the necessary construction changes, said the project should begin sometime in early March.

"We're accommodating the new owner's needs," said Mandurrago. " Right now we're in the process of picking a contractor to make the actual changes."

According to Mandurrago, the retail spaces that will be available for business purposes are currently for rent, and have attracted much interest.

The bottom level will provide 5,000 square-feet of retail space, explained Mandurrago.

"We're going to completely gut the building," he said.

The two-level building will undergo renovation this spring, according to Carmel planning officials.

"And the front and rear of the building will also be altered into a more modern French architectural motif design," Mandurrago said.

The three units upstairs will include a 3,000 square-foot condominium for the owner and two 650 square-foot studios for other tenants.

All that is left is for the Planning Commission to approve the street improvements and landscaping plans, Mandurrago said.

After the changes are completed, which could happen as soon as December, the only Carmel movie theater that, from a structural standpoint, will remain intact in the village is the Golden Bough, at Monte Verde and Eighth.

That building, however, has been converted into a home for live theater, as it is occupied by the Pacific Repertory Theatre.

DEDICATION

who contributed his design to White and Karas at no charge.

Over the past two years, many have remarked that the new structure is not as elegant as the old, but is functionally superior.

At the ceremony, White quipped, "Now the residents of Mission Fields can pull up some lawn chairs and watch that river to see if it rises."

Speaking before the group of about 40, Eastwood reminded those in attendance that he recently had purchased the Odello East artichoke fields (immediately northeast of the new bridge), which are being used as a Carmel River flood plain to prevent future flooding.

Jokes were cracked about the strange saga of the concrete boulder, dated 1933, the year in which the first bridge was built.

The two-ton item was stolen from a yard in which it was stored at Carmel Middle School. Some two weeks after the print and television media announced its disappearance, it was returned — in equally mysterious fashion.

All is well that ends well, and the stone now is anchored to the ground, a measure that wasn't anticipated but obviously necessary.

Carmel's 'gallant' patron saint of letters, gave of herself

By PAUL WOLF

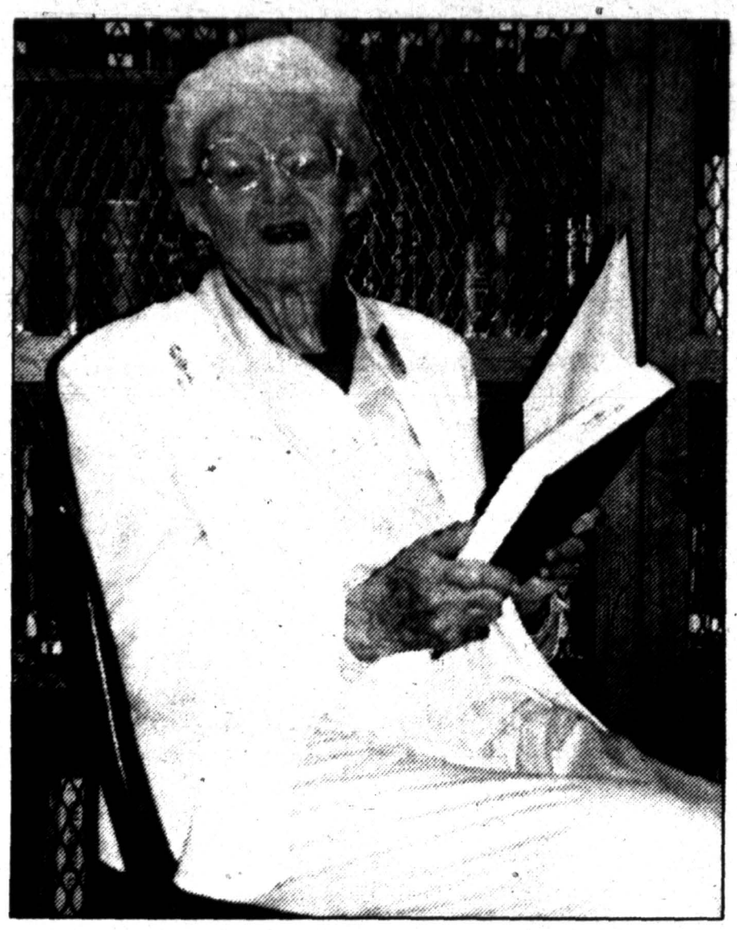
THE TITLE of her last book, "Every Day is a Gift," may say more about Iona Logie's approach to living than any other reminder of her legacy.

Always with unmatched enthusiasm, Dr. Logie served in the roles of teacher, counselor, author, advocate for women's issues and women's education, and, finally, as Carmel's very own patron saint of letters.

She died Saturday at the age of 97.

Dr. Logie will be remembered not only as a lover of life but a person of great enthusiasms — for literature, both light and serious, for Scotland and, by extension, for all things Scottish.

In recent years, according to close friends, declining health usually did not stop her from following those interests and maintaining an outgoing personal style that has been described as "gallant."



PINE CONE FILE PHOTO

Dr. Iona Logie's impact was felt on the Peninsula in many ways, including being named an 'Unsung Hero' in Carmel.

"To me, that book title says it all," said Lani Fremier, a friend and longtime librarian at the Harrison Memorial Library.

That volume, published in 1991, is a compilation of Dr. Logie's articles in local newspapers, including The Carmel Pine Cone, serving as her reflections on varied topics, everything from travel to retirement. A copy is available at Logie's beloved Carmel Harrison Memorial Library and the Local History Room.

A Carmel resident since 1970, Dr. Logie gave much of her best energy to the library and the Carmel Public Library Foundation.

"She was a great booster, lending her energy as well as her advice," said library board member Cecil Wahle. "She was one of those people who really lived out her convictions."

Learning and teaching

Having earned her master's degree in English and her doctorate in counseling psychology at Columbia University, Dr. Logie taught literature for many years at Hunter College in New York City.

Later, in San Francisco, she worked for 20 years under the Veterans Administration program for rehabilitation as a vocational and counseling psychologist for veterans of World War II, Korea and Vietnam.

Here on the Peninsula, she was among the women annually honored by the County Commission on the Status of Women and the American Association of University Women with a scholarship designated in her name.

In Carmel, her community service in 1992 was honored with her selection as an "Unsung Hero." In 1994, she served as the honorary chair of the campaign fund for the public library foundation.

Her advocacy in behalf of all libraries was constant. For example, in the early 1990s, she corresponded tirelessly with Monterey County officials to try to spare county funding for city branches.

These efforts were often made despite physical difficulties. "She had a spirit that was larger than her physical problems," said longtime library board member John Hicks.

Fremier characterized Dr. Logie as "a women's advocate in a genteel way, not in a strident way."

Scotland buff

Moreover, Dr. Logie, a member of the Scottish Society, had a certain fervent interest in Scotland, her parental homeland (Iona is the name of a Scottish island). For the Carmel Foundation, she presented many lectures on Scotland and England and was a member of the library's program commission.

She served on the boards of the YWCA, Altrusa International, the American Association of University Women, the Alliance on Aging, Friends of the Harrison Memorial Library and the Missions Committee of the Carmel Presbyterian Church.

Her publications include books on education and two books that focus on the role of women in the 20th Century: "Women in Journalism" and "Careers in the Marketing."

"She had an enormous influence for good in this community," Hicks said, "She was truly a gallant woman, a woman of poise and flourish."

In recent years, old age and increasing difficulty walking brought fewer trips to the library, and Dr. Logie became a recipient of the library's outreach program for the housebound. She continued to pore over Scottish and English mysteries and period novels, write fan letters to her favorite authors and play a serious game of Scrabble.

"She wasn't only a fierce lady of letters — quite an official scholar," said Carmelite Prim Billwiller.

To the YWCA

Long before her death, Dr. Logie donated the main residence of her Casanova Street property to the YWCA, making her home in the guest unit of the property. "She acted out her convictions," Wahle said.

Dr. Logie is survived by numerous cousins in Scotland and England, and by her adopted granddaughter, Ingrid Wekerle, of Carmel.

A private celebration, to be announced, will be held at the Carmel home of Wekerle.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

Taking responsibility as caregiver for elderly parents often produces family stresses and resentments. Recognizing this, agencies for the aging in some communities have organized support groups for caregivers. Meeting periodically, participants share problems and solutions with others in comparable situations. Under the guidance of a social worker or other moderator, caregivers learn how to deal constructively with frustration, anger or resentment.

Anne Scheiber, born 1894, didn't have it easy. Her father died when she was a child. School finished, she did bookkeeping, earned a law degree and became an Internal Revenue Service auditor in New York. she led colleagues in turning up unpaid taxes, but in 23 years she got no promotion and her pay never topped $4,000 a year. she quit in 1944, invested her $5,000 savings in stocks, reinvested dividends and lived simply. when she died in 1995 at age 101, her stocks were worth $22 million. she left the money to Yeshiva University to help bright, needy women prepare well if they run into job discrimination as she did.

BUDGET: Conservatism paying off the long-held targets of every reserve account, according to Assistant City Administrator Greg D'Ambrosio.

Conservative budgeting in the first half of the 1996-97 fiscal year, which began July 1, led to a $160,000 surplus of revenues over expenditures at mid-year (Dec. 31). Of that money, only $44,000 will be authorized for new spending through June 30, according to D'Ambrosio.

Two good years

Last year's books also closed under promising circumstances. It was clear at the end of the 1995-96 fiscal year (June 30), that projections for revenues had been set intentionally low and projections for expenditures had been intentionally high.

The city closed the last fiscal year with a $300,000 surplus, which was immediately directed toward reserves.

Not only have City Administrator Jere Kersnar and other city officials budgeted conservatively, but the economy has cooperated as well. Sales tax and room tax revenues continue to grow robustly, reflecting a strong local tourism trade.

By fiscal year's end, Carmel's total annual spending is projected to exceed $8.4 million, according to D'Ambrosio. That would overtake the pre-recession peak of the late 1980s, he said.

"This is strong, steady growth, but I would say it is not an exceptional, sharp, upward spike," D'Ambrosio said.

The growing budget notwithstanding, the size of the city's labor force has not grown to reach pre-recession levels, as only 83 full-time employees perform city services compared to the all-time high of 102.

At a budget meeting Monday, the council authorized the creation of an 84th full-time position — a computer systems specialist.

On Wednesday, the city administration placed ads in trade publications to announce the job opening, which will cost the city $67,000 in salaries and benefits in the 1997-98 fiscal year.

The citywide computer system has been operated for years by computer wizards from various departments — Jerry Pullen (personnel), Ron Spicer (police) and Bruce Meyer (fire).

"We have been very lucky to have these people, but we need someone who can be dedicated full-time to the technology," D'Ambrosio said. "We are not talking about cutting-edge stuff. We are talking about technology that is already there."

Another hiring project for the city is to find a full-time code-enforcement /planning officer.

A code-enforcer was hired earlier this year, but he stunned his new colleagues by accepting another job just days after starting with the Carmel Planning Department and receiving his initial training.

Good news on the financial front should be understood in its proper context, according to Carmel Councilwoman Paula Hazdovac, who serves on the council's finance committee.

Oh my! O'Meara takes the fifth

The envelope please: '97 winners and losers

THE 1997 AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am is in the books and what a week it was! The record crowds were treated to a spectacular finish when the classy veteran, Mark O'Meara, held off the charge of the remarkable Tiger Woods to capture his fifth AT&T title.

There were some other winners — and losers — as the weekend came to a close:

■ Winners: Lou Russo and his staff in the AT&T office for successfully completing the largest charity fund raiser on the Monterey Peninsula. The tremendous amount of planning and coordination that goes into the event is exhausting, for sure, but let us always remember that nearly $2 million is pumped back into our community's non-profit agencies.

■ Loser: The idiot who yelled "You're the man" during David Duval's downswing on the 18th hole Saturday at Pebble Beach Golf Links. Had Duval not pulled the relatively easy punch wedge, he may have birdied the 18th for a new course record 61. As it was, Duval, who finished in a second-place tie with Woods, now shares the record (62) at Pebble with Tom Kite.

The biggest winner at the 1997 AT&T was, of course, Mark O'Meara, who pocketed $342,000 for his unprecedented fifth win at this tournament.

■ Winners: The thousands of volunteers who graciously gave their time, and always with a smile.

■ Losers: Those 30-something's who think cigars are mandatory at golf tournaments.

■ Winner: O'Meara, obviously. He's won $440,460 in three weeks.

■ Loser: The local daily's sports editor whose column on Monday — "A loss he (Woods) deserved" — echoed the sentiments of oh, let's say, a gallery of one. The rest of us, in person or on TV, enjoyed the battle for what it was: golf at its very best.

■ Winners: Those guys behind the scenes in the CBS Sports trucks. Their operation is nothing short of unbelievable.

■ Loser: Anyone who thinks "lift, clean and place" is the only reason for the low scores last week. Face it — today's players are very good at getting the ball in the hole.

■ Winners: The golf course maintenance staffs at Pebble Beach, Spyglass Hill and Poppy Hills. The courses were in admirable shape given all the rain the Peninsula had endured.

■ Loser: Whoever thought up the stunt having Bill Murray pull the tuna out of the ice cream cart as

RLS hoop team looks for next victim; Padres get 1st win

■ Stevenson: Surging Pirates set to host Alisal.

By ABRAM TROSKY
Pine Cone Sports Correspondent

THE QUESTION for the 6-2 Robert Louis Stevenson boys varsity basketball team is "Can they do it again?"

Many said their 56-49 upset of first place Alisal on Jan. 15 was a fluke. However, if history manages to repeat itself when the two meet again Friday at Stevenson for a 7 p.m. matchup, there might be a new league champion.

Stevenson is currently in a three-way tie for second place with Pacific Grove (14-6 overall) and Palma (12-8 overall), which Stevenson managed to defeat 71-54 last Friday in Pebble Beach.

Revenge was sweet for Stevenson, which lost by 20 points the first time the two teams met Jan. 8.

"It was an outstanding team effort," said RLS head coach Bill Hankison, who pointed out that this is the fifth consecutive year a Pirate team has defeated the Chieftains in at least one meeting.

Ware leads way

Leading the Stevenson charge was point guard Jason Ware with 17 points — including four three-point field goals — followed by Matt Mraule and Jeff Yeh, who each had 14.

Mraule also came up big in Stevenson's 76-67 win over visiting Alvarez on Wednesday, Jan. 29. Mraule knocked down 20 points and had 11 rebounds in the contest, while Ware had 17 points.

Sophomore Clark Branscum added 11 points off the bench.

AFTER A dismal 0-7 start in Mission Trail Athletic League, Carmel High School boys varsity basketball team took a step in the right direction with a solid four-quarter effort last Friday night against Gonzales, a team that earlier had pinned a loss on the Padres.

The complete team effort resulted in a convincing 81-46 win for the Padres. Ben Cook poured in 27 points, a career high for the senior. Also chipping in were Chris Purdy with 15 points, and Trevor Fogg and Nick Cardinale with 11.

Judd Richards, Fogg and Cook crashed the boards all night while Cardinale provided capable ball handling.

Carmel will look to put together a winning streak when it hosts Alvarez on Friday night, and then travels to King City next Wednesday. The Eagles and Mustangs both notched narrow wins over Carmel in earlier

CBS' cameras were rolling Saturday afternoon. Too staged.

All of us should look at this event realistically. The intimacy of the Bing Crosby Pro-Am is gone forever. But the AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am is still the single most important event on the Monterey Peninsula. Merchants, hotels, restaurants and our many valued charities will confirm that fact.

Setting the record straight

REGARDING SCOTT A. Brown's column "Laughing Again at '97 Writers Dinner" (Pine Cone, Jan. 30), CBS Sports golf analyst Ken Venturi was responding to a comment made by Bob Murphy, master of ceremonies, not Monterey County Herald columnist Bob Hughes, when he said, "What's black and blue and lies in the gutter? People who tell Italian jokes."

matchups. The two tilts tip off at 7 p.m.

■ GIRLS BASKETBALL

Playoff fever is in the air as the Carmel High girls won two more games last week to up their record to 5-4 in the MTAL.

"We're starting to come around a little," said coach Dave Stainbrook. "We only need three more wins in our last seven games to secure a CCS (Central Coast Section playoff) spot."

The Padres downed crosstown rival Pacific Grove last Wednesday by a score of 42-35. Sadie Thomas paved the way with 11 points while Shannon Dougherty added eight.

Two nights later, Gonzales was the victim in a 48-45 Padre victory. Kim Dickerhoof was a force down low with 14 points. Point guard Michelle Gaudoin contributed 10 points.

Carmel travels to Santa Catalina today, to Alvarez tomorrow and returns home against King City Wednesday. All varsity games begin at 6:45 p.m.

Remynse continues to pace Carmel High wrestling team

By TREVOR FOGG
Pine Cone Sports Correspondent

CARMEL HIGH School's wrestling team enjoyed success at a dual meet against Alisal last Thursday as two of the team's four members scored victories.

Senior Jason Remynse continued to destroy Mission Trail Athletic League opponents, taking his match with a pin.

Mike Scardina, the team's No. 5-ranked wrestler, was forced to sit out the meet with a strained leg muscle.

Because of a loss Jan. 16 at King City, Remynse looks to be the second seed in the heavyweight class at the league championships, which take place Feb. 13.

"All of the guys are trying real hard and we can't wait for league championships," said coach Pete DeVlaminick.

■ FIELD HOCKEY

Carmel continued its frustrating season, suffering three losses in as many games.

Against Catalina on Jan. 21, the Padres lost 3-0 on a rain-soaked field. After losing 3-0 to York last Thursday, Carmel fell again to Monterey Monday, this time by a score of 2-0.

Alyse LeValley and Whitney Fisher put forth valiant efforts against Monterey for the Padres, who were around the goal throughout the game but could not convert a score.

Alison Dowling, who recently took over Carmel's goaltending duties, performed admirably and had 12 saves against the Toreadores.

The Padres have one more chance to record a victory this season when they host North Salinas at 3:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Carmel soccer teams on fire; face off with RLS Friday

By TREVOR FOGG
Pine Cone Sports Correspondent

THE CARMEL High School girls soccer team continued its impressive play with two incredible wins this past week.

On Tuesday, the Padres ousted King City 1-0 on their home turf to move up to third place in the Mission Trail Athletic League.

Carmel controlled the defensive battle, with fullback Tsuyeko Western and Nancy Valdez in the lead, and Stephanie Quinn provided the team's offense. Quinn hovered around the net all day, and finally scored the winning goal with 10 minutes remaining in the game on an assist from Nina Hendricks.

The Padres then moved into second place by defeating defending MTAL defending champion Notre Dame in Carmel last Thursday. Despite being without leading scorer Sarah Coombe (pulled leg muscle) and Quinn (sprained ankle), the Padres still managed a 2-0 victory.

The Padres scored at the 15-minute mark on a put-back by Andrea Dalessio. In the waning moments of the first half, Natalie Johnson nailed a monster goal on a penalty kick from 30 yards out after Jana Bray was fouled pushing the ball up field.

In the second half, Valdez took over, putting out all of Notre Dame's offensive threats, including a blocked penalty kick.

After the game, coach Pat Lenz remarked, "The entire team played a near perfect game. All 16 players contributed to the win."

With Notre Dame the most recent victim in Carmel's six-game win streak, the Padres have put themselves into serious contention for a playoff spot for the first time in school history.

Carmel wraps up its season by playing host to Robert Louis Stevenson today at 3:30 p.m., and then by traveling to Catalina on Tuesday for a 3 p.m. contest.

■ BOYS SOCCER

The Carmel High varsity boys soccer team caught fire last week by winning all three of their games, including do-or-die battles against King City and Gonzales.

In defeating King City 3-2 on Wednesday, Jan. 29, the Padres moved into a third-place tie with Alisal in the MTAL. Geronimo Volpini led the offense with a goal and the winning assist to Zak Freedman.

The Padres' other goal came from Brendan Jones on an assist from Lindley Zerbe. Carmel goalie Devin Dombrowski kept the contest close throughout with several amazing saves.

On Friday, Carmel traveled to Palma where it received a scare from one of the MTAL's cellar-dwellars. After allowing the Chieftains to get on the board first, the Padres managed a 2-1 victory behind goals from Volpini and Jacob Kovacs.

Carmel then recorded an enormous 2-0 win Monday afternoon over Gonzales to lift itself into a first-place tie in the MTAL and to remain unbeaten at home this season. The victory virtually assures the Padres of receiving a spot in the Central Coast Section playoffs.

Skip Powers scored against Gonzales on a loose ball after a corner kick squirted away from the pack. Kovacs capped the scoring with a penalty kick late in the second half. Carmel's defense, led by Jones, Kovacs, Tim Pfeiffer and Oscar Guerrero, stymied the Gonzales attack with only five shots on goal.

The surging Padres will close out their regular season by traveling to Robert Louis Stevenson tomorrow for a 3 p.m. game and then by hosting York on Wednesday. That game begins at 3:30 p.m.

RLS' Simonsen, Carmichael, Hebert notch goals in victory

By JOHN BENNER
Pine Cone Sports Correspondent

THE ROBERT Louis Stevenson boys soccer team will challenge Carmel High on Friday in a match that may determine the Pirates' chances for a Central Coast Section playoff appearance.

The Pirates dominated last Wednesday's match with York, winning 3-1 with goals from Paul Simonsen, Brian Carmichael and Erik Hebert.

The win was enough to erase disappointment from last Friday's loss to Alisal in a down-to-the-wire game that wasn't decided until the final seconds. Tied 1-1 at the end of the second half on a goal by Jeff Petrie, Alisal scored on a breakaway goal late to win the contest 2-1.

The Pirates host Carmel at 3 p.m. Friday.

■ GIRLS SOCCER

Stevenson is on a winning streak, pulling out victories against Alisal and Pacific Grove in their most recent matches.

Standout midfield striker Laura Hebert led Stevenson to victory on Tuesday, Jan. 28 over the Breakers, scoring two goals in a 2-1 win. Sophomore Chiara Riggs equaled Hebert's achievement two days later, burying both goals in her squad's 2-0 victory over Alisal.

With three games left this season, the Pirates face a difficult challenge at home today in Central Coast Section championship contender Carmel High. The match begins at 3 p.m.

Stevenson coach Megan Icenogle cited today's contest as being critical to the Pirates' playoff chances. "The keys to a win will be an aggressive defense and control of the midfield," she said.

The latest roadblock

Dear Editor:

The latest attempt to stymie a solution to the water needs of the Monterey Peninsula has now reared its head in the form of Measure A.

It has the appearance of a sneaky attempt to stop all growth by limiting our water supply. It purports to assure no further development until a "reliable water supply" is secured, but at the same time makes the expeditious creation of a "reliable water supply" nearly impossible by requiring "voter approval" of the transfer of the existing dam permits.

Given all the politicking, confusion and misinformation to which that process is susceptible, "voter approval" may not be achieved until it is too late.

Twenty-five years ago, the citizens of Marin County tried exactly such a limitation on growth, and the drought of the mid-'70s left them in a near disaster situation that an emergency pipeline from the East Bay cities only slightly eased. They suffered draconian water-use limitations — a situation we will surely face at the next drought, if Measure A passes.

The matter of the dam has been virtually studied to death. The permits are finally there after all this time, so let's use them and get on with the project.

To do so, though, we must kill this roadblock to an adequate water supply by voting no on Measure A.

Pine Cone increases circulation to all-time high: 16,000

We at The Carmel Pine Cone are pleased to announce that we have increased our circulation dramatically as of this week.

In response to increased demand throughout the Peninsula, we now are distributing an all-time-high number of copies— 16,000.

The previous circulation was 12,500.

Our number of drop-off points has been increased to provide for the additional circulation.

We also would like to announce that we will distribute an additional 4,000 copies of The Pine Cone's Peninsula section (the newspaper's second section) in areas with the most visitor traffic.

Next step in transportation

Dear Editor:

The recent improvements made by Caltrans to the intersection of Highway One and Carmel Valley Road have greatly facilitated entry into the valley from the north.

This was only the first part of 12 improvements authorized by the California Transportation Commission (CTC) three years ago. The long delay in implementing measures to ease the traffic congestion has been very frustrating to local motorists, and goes unexplained by Caltrans.

The next vital step is to eliminate the one-lane bottleneck on Highway One that causes backup on Carmel Valley Road, and from Rio Road going north.

One lane on the highway going south seems to be adequate, as most of the traffic going south now is able to turn promptly onto Carmel Valley Road.

A recent call to the area project engineers in San Luis Obispo disclosed that there are no plans to construct the other improvements ordered by the CTC. The reason given is that they are not considered necessary if the Hatton Canyon Freeway is constructed.

The indifference of Caltrans to local traffic problems in favor of massive freeway projects is intrinsic. Earthquakes severely damaged three freeway projects in San Francisco. They are not going to be reconstructed after being torn down because they have been found to be unnecessary and the city doesn't want them.

The Carmel Valley Property Owners Association was in favor of the Hatton Canyon Freeway until the design was revealed. The present misconceived design would reverse the presently smooth-working improvement.

There would be two lanes heading south, bypassing Rio Road and entering one lane at the river, but only a single lane off-ramp turning into the two lanes on Carmel Valley Road.

A new five-phased stoplight would be interposed before the one at Rancho Boulevard. All the traffic now turning off Highway 1 at Rio Road also would be funneled onto Carmel Valley Road, unless motorists skip the freeway and turn down Atherton Drive, which would increase traffic through residential areas.

The merchants in the mouth of the valley are concerned that this disruption of easy access will severely affect their businesses, and are opposed to the freeway in favor of improvements to the present Highway 1.

Fortunately, the courts have ordered Caltrans to consider alternatives to the Hatton Canyon Freeway, but for environmental reasons, not poor design.

Let us hope Caltrans will recognize that Highway One is the only major arterial connecting the various cities and districts on the Peninsula, and is crucial for the smooth flow of local traffic. The freeway should not be designed to provide travelers a straight shot through the area, as most of them will want to turn off into one of our communities.

Whether or not a more functional and less intrusive freeway can be designed and built some time in the future, we need the gridlock ameliorated now, as was recognized by the California Transportation Commission.

The CVPOA calls upon the Transportation Agency for Monterey County, the Monterey County Board of Supervisors and civic bodies on the Peninsula to demand that the CTC require Caltrans to promptly provide the other traffic improvements on Highway 1 and Carmel Valley Road.

Putting tree cutting matter into perspective

Dear Editor:

The article "A Case of Urban Logging," published in The Pine Cone Jan. 16, misinformed the public and distorted the intentions of the owners of Carmel Rancho Shopping Center. The Sycamore trees were removed in order to implement the following improvements along Carmel Rancho Boulevard:

- A new traffic signal.
- An updated Monterey-Salinas Transit bus stop.
- A new sidewalk and underground utilities.
- A new backflow preventer as required by California American Water Company.
- The addition of handicapped ramps at all curbside entrances.
- Widening of the boulevard to accommodate a right turn lane.

This work was mandated by the County of Monterey and is being implemented at no cost to taxpayers. The shopping center has worked extensively with the County of Monterey to select drought-tolerant, ornamental street trees and shrubs to enhance the boulevard. Sycamore trees are disease-prone, not drought-tolerant, and were probably planted by the former owners for their fast growing capabilities.

Mr. Wachs, where have you been for the past four years? Since 1992 Carmel Rancho Shopping Center owners have been working their way through the approval process in an effort to improve the property. We have held hearings before the Lower Carmel Advisory Committee, the Monterey County Planning Commission, the Monterey County Public Works Department, and the Monterey County Board of Supervisors. The public was invited to attend all of these meetings.

We have spent a substantial amount of money to enhance not only the shopping center but the boulevard and adjacent landscaping. Our goal is to make Carmel Rancho Shopping Center a safer, more attractive place to shop and do business for both our merchants, their customers, and the general public.

Dave Fairbank, general manager
Carmel Rancho Shopping Center

Measure A's pitfalls

Dear Editor:

Securing a sound water supply for the Monterey Peninsula's future has been a concern of mine for a number of years. When people voted against issuing bonds to develop a new dam in 1995 I was disappointed, but hoped that the concept of a privately financed dam would not be lost.

Cal-Am's November announcement of its intent to develop a no-growth dam and reservoir on the Carmel River renewed my hopes for a secure water supply. There are, however, dark skies ahead.

Measure A, the so-called "POWR" initiative, will limit the ability of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District (MPWMD) to fulfill its purpose, namely: managing water resources to provide for the needs of the community.

If Measure A passes, the water district will be greatly limited in properly considering the proposed Carmel River Dam and Reservoir Project.

While I know that many people are not fond of the MPWMD, its staff consists of water resource experts. These people are paid to know how best to secure our needed water supply. With the State Water Resources Control Board cutting back on our water supply by 60 percent, it will need as much freedom as possible to navigate through our water limitations.

Voters within the MPWMD will soon receive a mail-in ballot on Measure A. I strongly urge my fellow water users to vote no on this measure.

By doing so, you will keep it out of the hands of those who generate hot political rhetoric and deception, and keep it in the hands of the experts who can secure a water supply for residents.

There when we need them

Dear Editor:

On a late Saturday just prior to Christmas, we became aware of a fast-moving, heavy, filmy mist quickly spreading through our home in Carmel Woods.

This twirling haze failed to disappear even when we opened windows and doors and we realized we had a problem and quickly called 911. Members of the Pebble Beach Fire Department seemed to appear on the scene within moments and started immediate corrective procedures.

We wish to extend our thankful commendation and appreciation for their prompt response, their courtesy and above all their professionalism in dealing with the serious dangers of this accident of flooding, gas leaking and flames.

We were lucky not to lose our home and indeed grateful to the dedicated fire department members.

a less ambitious, less costly undertaking.

But as Carmel Mayor Ken White said before casting the last vote, the historic preservation model would have failed to fulfill the requirements spelled out in the city's "needs assessment."

Council members agreed with most of those in the performing arts community that a long list of improvements needs to be carried out if the city is to retain its place as the premiere arts community on the Central Coast.

"This is what Carmel is known for — culture and the arts," said Councilman Bob Fischer. "It's time for us to bite the bullet."

Keeping elements

White vowed to bring the different factions together and insure that the as-yet unfinished BOOR/A design incorporate as many preservation elements as possible.

(The BOOR/A project is named for the Oregon firm that specializes in theater design and, upon the city's request, produced a preliminary model for how the city should renovate Sunset Center.)

Marshall Hydorn

Councilman Marshall Hydorn offered comforting words, saying, "I sympathize with those who already feel the loss of Sunset Center. We shouldn't think of this (project) as the loss of an old friend but the birth of a new child. It will be better than the old building in all aspects, but will carry on the finest of its traditions."

The BOOR/A plan, while improving the stage, sightlines, acoustics and other support facilities, would have similar exterior architecture to the existing building, according to city officials.

Looking toward the future, Carmel Cultural Director Brian Donoghue, a major supporter of the BOOR/A plan, stated, "Getting the unanimous support of the council is an important first step. It will help us in attracting funding sources for this project."

The next step, according to City Administrator Jere Kersnar, is for the city staff to meet with the non-profit fund-raising group, Sunset Center for the Arts, to discuss strategies for securing the money.

Among her council colleagues, Paula Hazdovac appeared to have the greatest concerns about the financial implications of pursuing the BOOR/A plan, suggesting that unwelcome surprises could arise.

Although voting for the BOOR/A, Hazdovac asked a series of focused questions about how financial issues would be addressed in the months to come.

Sticking points

On the subject of paying for both capital costs and operating expenses, consider the following:

■ A funding pinch could prove a problem for the city council.

Sunset Center for the Arts has committed itself to raising money for the project's construction so that local taxpayers won't be asked to chip in.

Annual operating expenses, meanwhile, are not projected to increase from their current levels, according to city officials. The city administrator explained that unanticipated expenses would have to be covered by new revenue sources, which would need local voter approval, in accordance with November's Proposition 218.

■ As much as $5 million in parking improvements envisioned to accompany the project are as yet unpaid for.

By agreeing to consider the need for a parking garage or structure at a later date, the council put off discussion of a key financial dilemma. Representatives of the Sunset Center for the Arts have informed The Pine Cone that the group is unlikely to take on that extra burden. Meanwhile, the city lacks the funds to tackle parking improvements.

It is not entirely clear how many more spaces are needed to accompany the increased use of the complex brought on by the BOOR/A project.

The amount of seating will not significantly increase with the project, but the number of monthly performances is likely to increase.

At the public hearing, there were fervent voices urging the council not to sell out to big-city cultural attractions.

Enid Sales, who chairs the city's Historic Preservation Committee, called Sunset Center the "historic essence of our unique village."

"Do we want to destroy Sunset Center and turn it into a one-size-fits-all facility with big-city attractions like musicals and operas?" asked Carmel resident Ann Woolworth.

Linda Anderson, chairwoman of the Carmel Community and Cultural Commission, which supports the BOOR/A plan, rebutted that the current users of the facility also will be the future users, and the overall character of programming won't change.

Resident Neal Kruse, who chaired the disbanded but still influential 2016 Committee, argued that the city must keep up with the times.

"If we stay fixed in one place," Kruse said, "we are going to find out that things are changing, whether we want it or not."

FINANCES

Not enough surplus funds will be available for major new programs and projects, she said. For example, the city's current financial picture could not make room for financing the proposed parking facility (projected cost: $5 million) to accompany the hopeful renovation of Sunset Center.

Paula Hazdovac

"I am still guarded," Hazdovac said. "We've had earthquakes and floods and other events. Carmel is built-out in its commercial and residential districts. We rely very heavily on how well our local economy is doing. I am guarded. You have to remain guarded."

Issues caution

Carmel Mayor Ken White added another cautionary note: The city is millions of dollars behind in repairs to streets, buildings and other facilities, all projects that cannot be put off indefinitely.

"Infrastructure spending is going to be my No. 1 priority," White said. "It is good to know that, after four years of tight budgets, we are in a real bright spot.

"We will be able to start to do some things that we haven't been able to do for years."

The actor in his long-time guise as Scrooge...

And Robert Colter as himself.

Keeping up with actor Robert Colter

■ Editor's note: This is the debut column in a series that will run monthly in Peninsula. Author Mark Shilstone-Laurent is a local actor, director and college instructor.

POUND FOR pound, monologue for monologue, few would deny that Robert Colter is one of the area's finest actors. He has a beautiful, well-trained baritone voice and seemingly effortless technique. He's the kind of actor who draws your eye and catches your interest.

Bob's resume is endless, but his latest efforts include "A Christmas Carol" (his eighth year as Scrooge!), "Jake's Women," "Voice of the Prairie" and "Speed the Plow," all with Carey Crockett's Unicorn Theatre.

Profiles in Performance

By Mark Shilstone-Laurent

I holed up with Bob and a tape recorder in a local bar the other night and gave him an opportunity to talk about what he does and how he does it. The actor's art is one of the most nebulous extant. There are as many means to an end leading to that performance we finally see onstage as there are actors. He chatted about HIS approach to the art of performance for a good hour or so.

What follows is a condensation of his thoughts.

SHILSTONE-LAURENT: Bob, talk to me about this weird art form, acting.

COLTER: To tell you what I think about the whole art form of acting? Well, let me put it this way. Sometimes you get actors with an attitude. You say, "Wait a minute. This is a holy place you're in. You'd better show some damn gratitude. Because it's an honor to get up in front of that audience and do that. And you better appreciate where the heck you are and how grateful you should be."

El Vez takes the myth a step beyond

'There are so many different levels going on at once. It's not just for Latinos and not just for Elvis fans.' – Robert Lopez

By KRISTI BELCAMINO

NINE YEARS ago, armed with a gold lamé costume, songs like "You Ain't Nothing but a Chihuahua" and a plane ticket to Memphis, Robert Lopez changed the world of Elvis impersonators forever.

He became the Mexican Elvis.

To his surprise, the performance at "Elvis Week" led to seven albums featuring his character, "El Vez," and multiple worldwide tours.

Cumulating two years of world touring, El Vez, performing "Rockin' Revolution," will be featured at Performance Carmel at 8 p.m. Saturday at the Sunset Theater.

El Vez and the Elvettes, the beehive-coiffed Priscillita, Gladysita, Lisa Marie and Que Linda Thompson, have performed everywhere from Napa Valley wineries to posh supper clubs in New York to giant outdoor festivals.

Uncommon Edna Bullock images shown

"EDNA'S PORTRAITS," a collection of photographs by Edna Bullock, opens Sunday at the Santa Catalina School Gallery in Monterey.

Spanning the artist's photographic career from 1976 to the mid-'90s, the newly curated exhibit goes beyond the conventional concept of portraits and provides a fresh glimpse into the octogenarian's multifaceted imagery.

"Although I'm probably best known for my nudes," Bullock says, "they represent only a part of my work. All of life intrigues me — especially the quiet, commonplace, often overlooked aspects of it — and a good way for me to explore it is to make portraits.

"What I call portraits," she continues, "are photographs not just of people but of other things as well that reveal something interesting about their being and about life as a whole."

Included in this latest Edna Bullock exhibit are many photographs that are new to the public. The show will continue to be on display through April 20, and can be viewed during regular gallery hours: 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

Wife, mother, and teacher of dance, physical education and home economics, Edna Bullock didn't began her career as a photographer until 1976 at the age of 61. Her husband, photographer Wynn Bullock, had died the year before.

"I had inherited a darkroom, camera equipment, and supplies," she explains. "For over 30 years, I had been immersed in the world of photography. My own needs to be artistically creative had become increasingly compelling."

Edna Bullock captured this image at the Carmel Mission in 1976. It can be viewed in the photographer's new exhibit.

Fancy food fair oddities induce paralysis of the palate

Traveling Gourmet

By Lotte Mendelsohn

I ALWAYS LIKEN the NASFT (Fancy Foods Fair) in San Francisco to the running of the bulls in Pamplona. This year was no exception! There was the usual maze, with several products prominent ad nauseum. This year's most represented: No. 1: hot sauces and condiments, No. 2: flavored oils, No. 3: cookies and No. 4: biscotti.

With more than 2,000 exhibitors filling the gargantuan Moscone Center, the trade attendees soon suffered from paralysis of the palate.

We're aware of the event theory which says chaos makes for discovery, but it would seem to me that organizing the categories so that the buyer may compare and sample one kind of food at a time would not be remiss. Our post-breakfast tasting bounced from Jack Daniels-filled truffles to Hip-Hoppin' Jalapeno Salsa to San Daniele Prosciutto from Parma. By the third hour this confusion of flavors had both of us dyspeptic and cross.

Hot peppers (chilies) have taken over the world. Some of the salsa names bring a smile: Jamaica Hellfire, Cryin' Over Cayenne, Molten Lava, Pyromania Hot Sauce, Hell Fire & Damnation, Crying Tongue Hot Sauce, Spontaneous Combustion etc.; but while the lips stretch, inside the mouth, the upper palate has stalactites of flesh waving off any more abuse.

One exhibitor's hottest (bad pun) items were Jalapeno chocolates, while another caught my spouse by surprise with his Cayenne Jelly Beans (he thought those pretty red sweets were raspberry-flavored)! There's even a New Jersey Company that calls itself, "Chile Today-Hot Tamale Inc."

The oils ran the added flavor gamut from all sorts of herbs waving about like kelp in an aquarium to again a piquant "Habañero Tequila." There was olive oil flavored with licorice, pepperoni, grappa and "PestOh." And as far as cookies and biscotti are concerned — Omigawd, enough!

The following two companies are both involved with humanitarian pursuits as well as profit. Congratulations!

Restaurant

Feature of the Week:

London Bridge Pub

A British-style pub, authentic down to its dart games and 65 different beers, also offers something un-British: a view of the Monterey yacht harbor.

This friendly establishment is the London Bridge Pub, open for lunch and dinner every day on Wharf No. 2 in Monterey. Owned by Bunny Riley, the pub is the most convenient source for English cuisine this side of Liverpool. Indulge in fish and chips with all the fixings, not to mention bangers and mash, cottage pie and other British favorites. The restaurant/pub opens at 11:30 every day, and serves meals until 10 p.m., until 11 on Fridays and Saturdays. The pub remains open until 1 a.m.

In the tradition of a neighborhood "local" in England, The London Bridge Pub is also the place to meet friends, play a game of darts and enjoy an artfully brewed pint of beer. Dozens of beers are available, and on tap are such stalwart imported labels as Guinness, Harp, Bass, Newcastle and Double Diamond. The pub has sponsored teams of the Monterey Bay Dart League, so don't be surprised to see players polishing their form.

The pub boasts outdoor seating and welcomes families. Parking is plentiful in the nearby city-metered lot.

Soon the pub will also offer English souvenirs and grocery items in its gift shop. To learn more, call 655-2879.

GOURMET...

made by Moshe & Ali of Peaceworks. Part of the company's profits are allotted to a joint Arab-Israeli cooperative for peaceful co-existence. Fax: (212) 831-0982.

More new or noteworthy products:

Bread dips in four flavors, sundried tomato, olive and herb, artichoke and caper and peppers and spice, all with pure olive oil bases and garlic. The Bread Dip Co. based on San Juan Island in Washington State takes advantage of the craze for bread lubrication that is not cholesterol-laden. Fax: (360) 378-5346.

Italian organic kiwi products; spreads, syrup, canned slices and a delightful kiwi drink. Fax: (213) 938-5056.

Hacienda de Chihuahua, "Reposado Sotol," a new agave liquor from Chihuahua, Mexico. Smoother and lighter on the palate than most Tequilas or Mescals. Fax: 5214-16-03-11.

"O"= Meyer lemon and blood orange-infused olive oils in the most striking packaging of the show. Simply a huge white "O" on a black square. Great alone as salad dressing, no vinegar or lemon needed. Fax: (415) 491-4258.

And then there were several products classified as New Age beverages which include:

Hemp, a German soft drink debuted in Holland and made from the fibrous herb we associate with cord and rope. (Isn't hemp psycho-active like marijuana?) Fax: 0049 211-9779277. (Dusseldorf)

Aloe'Ha, aloe-based soft drink with fructose in eight fruit flavors. Fax: (713) 785-9433.

Tazo's Chai, a black tea, spice and honey blend served with milk. It is said to have miraculous, "pick-ye-up" or "calm-ye-down" powers. Packaged by an Oregon company specializing in "rediscovered" herbal and botanical infusions and historical teas. Another interesting product is their Microbrewed Frozen Tea Ice Bars each with its own inspirational message imprinted on the stick. Move over fortune cookies! Tel: (800) 299-9445.

More

Artisan sheep milk (as well as goat and cow) cheeses, from Bellwether Farms in Sonoma. Available: Toscano, fresco, caciotta, pepato and diavolo. Fax: (707) 763-2443.

Puroast Coffee grown in Oaxaca, Mexico. Their motto is "Feel better, not bitter." The coffee goes down like silk, full-bodied without an aftertaste. A delight for those of us who like our coffee strong but not necessarily French Roasted (burned to me). Eight different blends including a French Roast and Swiss water-process decaffeinated. Tel: (888) 4PUROAST.

Pepper Chicks™, Jalapeno Chocolate Snacks, "Fine Chocolate That Bites Back®"; raisins, pretzels, malt balls and toasted corn. Fax: (214) 458-1883.

Sadeg Organic Extra Virgin Olive Oil, grown in Palermo, California, is first cold-pressed from ripe mission olives and glows golden green in its sleek bottle. Tel: (800) 400-8851.

Veggibles™, crunchy, barbecue-flavor snacks made from a variety of pretty vegetables are one of the first products from the merger of Frieda's (of purple label exotic produce fame) and the Beverly Hills Farmers Market Inc. Fax: (213) 848-8872.

And what Fancy Food show would be complete without truffles and caviar? My choice of purveyor would be Urbani, USA. The company imports both black and white truffles, and other exotic mushrooms; Beluga, Osetra and Sevruga caviars, "Bottarga di Tonno," bluefin caviar; smoked Sicilian tuna and swordfish, and Scottish and Norwegian smoked salmon. They also package stunning gift baskets priced from $42 to $150. Tel: (800) 281-2330.

And as with every mammoth presentation there were private chuckles. For us it was that four impassioned exhibitors touted the purity and excellence of their product — the product — bottled water from Mexico!

Fetzer hosts chocoholics

Want to spend a tasty Valentine's Day? — head up to Hopland and join the good folk at Fetzer for their 12th Annual Red Wine and Chocolate Spectacular. Led by the winery's genial culinary director, John Ash, this is always a terrific event. Romantic live music is promised and samples of the latest wine right out of the barrel. Speaking of Fetzer, ran into Sid Goldstein, Fetzer's marketing director, who informed me that he'll be spending more time in the area, working with their newest acquisition: Jekel Vineyards in Greenfield. Welcome to Heaven, Sid. Fetzer (800) 846-8637.

Another special Valentine package offered

"Bread, Breakfast and the Beaujolais" features the best of Mendocino. The package is offered midweek and includes overnight lodging with full country breakfast at the Joshua Grindle Inn, and then a three-course dinner with a glass of wine at the 5-star Cafe Beaujolais. Cost: $175 per couple. For a ribbon adorned gift certificate call: 1-800-GRINDLE.

Cruise company has a sale

Renaissance Cruises is advertising an $8,000 saving per luxury suite for its 11-day Greek Isles Cruise, if you book before Feb. 7. (Tell them you read it here and they'll give you an extra day or two.) The nicest thing about the Renaissance adventure is that it carries just 114 passengers, so that in 11 days almost everyone knows everyone else. Call (800) 525-5350 or your travel agent.

Your input to The Traveling Gourmet is vital. Let me know your food, restaurant, wine and travel news, so I can share it with our readers. You can call me at the paper 624-0162, fax me direct at 626-6583, or E-mail me at: TRAVGOURMT@aol.com. Deadline for receipt of written announcements is Tuesday, two weeks before an event.

Inclusion is subject to space restrictions, and is strictly editorial. Mention is not for sale.

Real estate investment trusts (REITs) provide sweet alternative

California Trends

By Bradley Inman

THE REAL ESTATE industry often gets upset when the stock market is flying high because many investors choose to buy stocks instead of purchasing a new home, apartment or vacation property.

Likewise, Wall Street has a jaded view about real estate investments, particularly when home prices are inflating wildly and people can't get enough property in their portfolio.

Then there is the real estate/stock hybrid, Real Estate Investment Trusts, which is a fancy name for a publicly-traded company that owns or operates real estate as its core business. With property portfolio values that often exceed $1 billion, REITs generally offer investors both a dividend from rents and property management fees and growth from further acquisitions and appreciation in the property market.

Red hot right now

Blending the rewards and risks of both real estate and the stock market, REITs are red hot right now as they outperform the average stock and far outpace the rate of inflation on the typical American home or investment property.

Total return on REIT investments last year was a whopping 35 percent, while the S&P 500 increased 23 percent and the average resale home only rose 6 percent, according to a new study by Montgomery Securities, San Francisco.

REITs are the angels of Wall Street for three reasons. The real estate market has fully recovered; there is fear that the overall stock market is overvalued and pension funds are turning to REITs as an alternative to investing directly in buildings and land.

> 'Blending the rewards and risks of both real estate and the stock market, REITs are red hot right now as they outperform the average stock and far outpace the rate of inflation on the typical American home or investment property.'

"REITs have the added benefits of market demand stemming from a systematic change in how pension funds and insurance companies own real estate," according to the Montgomery Securities report. Many of these big institutional investors got hurt with their direct investments in office buildings and raw land in the 1980s. They have begun to realize that they don't know enough about the business to take such an active role. A well managed REIT has two things going for a pension investor: expertise and a prime real estate portfolio.

Another change is the creation of specialized mutual funds that invest in real estate through REITs, which has attracted individual investors to the market.

Today, there is more than $75 billion invested in 60 different REIT mutual funds.

A strong real estate market has certainly captured the allure of investors. Apartments, retail centers, office buildings and hotels are all booming. Occupancy rates are rising and rent growth is expected in nearly every sector. For example, office buildings are expected to experience rent increases of 9 to 10 percent in 1997 and apartments 4 to 5 percent.

Goldilocks pace

"With a national economy continuing along its Goldilocks pace ('not too hot, not too cold') and new construction in check, our expectation is that property performance should continue to outpace inflation by 1 or 2 percent in 1997," said Montgomery real estate analyst Christopher J. Hartung.

Interest rates are another factor helping REIT performance because low rates help them finance the acquisition and development of new properties.

> 'We believe the REIT industry is fairly valued to undervalued.'
> — Christopher J. Hartung

Of course, there is some fear that REITs will go sideways the way they did in the early 1970s when real estate stocks crashed and disappeared from the stock exchange. But REITs were resurrected in the last several years when property owners needed new ways to refinance their undervalued holdings after the real estate crash of the late 1980s and early 1990s.

REITs were reconstituted with stricter regulatory oversight including tougher requirements on owners and developers to put up more equity.

Moreover, experts say that REITs are not overvalued today.

"We believe the REIT industry is fairly valued to undervalued," said Hartung.

Over the long term, the REIT industry, which is generally composed of people who have owned or operated real estate companies of one sort or another, would like to be treated by Wall Street as any other operating company.

Considering the mistakes made by the real estate industry in the past and the cycles the property market invariably goes through, that may be asking too much.

For now, REITs may just want to enjoy Wall Street's adulation, however temporary.

A GREAT LISTING TAKES PLANNING

The listing presentation is the first step most sellers take when they are looking for a real estate professional to market their home. They communicate what they expect their marketing strategy, including pricing recommendations, advertising, and any special programs they or their companies offer.

A good listing presentation takes careful planning. A written market analysis will help you get a clear idea of local market conditions. Many Realtors will include a marketing plan, as well as suggestions on how to make sure that your home shows well and is accessible to agents. If you are talking to several companies, resist the temptation to go with the person who quotes you the highest price for your house. Look for an agent who is well prepared, professional, and has the best ideas. The most successful transactions involve careful collaboration between the sellers and the Realtor.

My roommate was depressed. More than the blues. I mean seriously depressed.

She always looked sad. Cried a lot. She couldn't sleep, eat, or do any of her work.

Treat it! Defeat it!

Most of the time she wouldn't talk to me. I just couldn't reach her.

I figured she needed to get professional help, before her pain got worse. So I checked it out.

I was amazed. Once her depression was diagnosed, treatment was effective and began to work within a few weeks.

ROBERT COLTER...

for Unicorn Theatre, you deal with all different levels of experience and talent. How does that affect your approach? Especially with the less experienced?

I guess I become more of a mentor — coaching, encouraging, trying to give advice where I can.

But doesn't that mess with YOUR process and the fun you could be having?

Well, sure. It makes your job a lot harder if they're not doing a scene well. Because the stuff I need to be bringing to the scene still has to come up and be there. What it boils down to is, the better they are, the more believable I am.

And when you're lucky enough to be working with experienced, well-trained people?

That makes my job a lot easier and a lot more fun. Then you can forget about all the technical stuff and just feed off of each other and then you build and grow.

When you are lucky enough to be cookin' along with people who can keep up with you, how often do you go into what I call "spiritual overdrive," or a sense of having your performance taken over by the Muses? They come to you and say "Don't worry, Robert, we'll take care of things tonight. You just relax and come along for the ride." Then everything just magically flows.

For me, it's impossible for an entire show to be like that. Like Bruce Dern says, you're lucky if it's all clicking for you 40 percent of the time. But certainly there are moments, or scenes or even entire acts where you hit all the emotional moments just right and make the thing really HAPPEN. In shows where I'm really nervous, though, I try to call down the Muses. Can anybody out there help me? And I swear to God, you get help!

Let's talk more specifically about your approach to the process. What things help you in the formative, rehearsal process, to find the character?

Well, of course a lot of the stuff is internal. But for me, anyway, it's a physical key. I find something that finally clicks in physically for the character and everything else falls into place. Sometimes it's a limp, sometimes — like playing Candy in "Of Mice and Men" — it's a different voice. After the voice kicked in, without even thinking about it, there he was.

You've done Scrooge in "A Christmas Carol" eight years now. Do you try to find a different physical thing each time?

Scrooge just comes over me like an old coat.

How do you keep him fresh?

Different casts! And also, you've had another year of life experience and you bring all of that stuff to it. Stuff that's happened in your love life, whatever the heck's been goin' on in your life.

What were you like as a kid? Did you start acting early on?

Living in a dysfunctional, codependent, alcoholic home like I did, acting was survival. You know I love doing comedy, and a lot of it is trying to laugh at all that garbage. I was the comedian at home.

Speaking of comedy, in your process do you approach comedy differently than you do tragedy or drama?

You can't play comedy to be funny. You have to play to the truth of what the thing is and the comedy comes out.

Who are your favorite actors to work with in this area?

I like working with Carey (Carey Crockett, artistic director of Unicorn) because he gives so much on stage and Phil Pratt is a lot of fun to play with. And of course, Marli Avant. She's marvelous.

Why?

Why? Because she gives so much and she's just so interesting to watch.

She does seem to love what she's doing and I think that's really what it all boils down to — that innocent pure pleasure in just doing it. An audience senses that.

Well, that's sure the joy in it for me. I just have a ball doing it, and I hope that comes across on stage.

Oh, it does, Bob. It does. And we all hope you keep on enjoying it for a long time to come.

'The Mexican Elvis' pays Carmel a concert call raphy, has something for everyone.

"There are so many different levels going on at once," said Lopez in a phone interview from his Paris hotel room. "It's not just for Latinos and not just for Elvis fans."

Like the sociopolitical commentary that is the core of the flashy El Vez show, the Mexican Elvis' scores of fans transcend age, culture, economics and language barriers:

Blonde, blue-eyed Norwegian kids who dress as wanna-be lowriders from Southern California, idolize him.

Middle-age women from Kansas who plaster the walls of their trailers with velvet Elvis pictures, adore him.

Yuppie hipsters in Manhattan who wear skinny ties and drink vodka martinis, dig him.

Punk rock kids, who wear black biker jackets and pierce and tattoo their bodies, admire him.

And young and old Latinos around the world cheer him on as he becomes maybe the best known Elvis impersonator on earth.

And purportedly the most intelligent one.

WHAT: Performance Carmel presents El Vez
WHEN: 8 p.m. Saturday
WHERE: Sunset Theater, San Carlos at Ninth, Carmel
COST: $16 and $12.50
INFO/RESERVATIONS: 624-3996

Spawned from a dare

Lopez, who formerly managed a Mexican folk art gallery in Los Angeles, said the first incarnation of El Vez actually spawned out of a dare.

"It was just a test to dare myself and do something like this and it kind of backfired and worked," he said.

Lopez said his idea to parody Elvis lyrics and turn them into sociopolitical commentary, such as singing "Immigration Time," to the tune of "Suspicious Minds," came from the idea that Elvis is a symbol of America around the world and that America is a melting pot.

"Elvis is an American icon and an American Dream — a poor man coming from nothing to become the biggest entertainer ever," said Lopez. "This can be applied to the Mexican immigrant coming to this country — if you work hard, you can be successful. You don't have to be a white man in your 40s to be part of that American dream. You can be Latino, black, Asian, straight, gay, etc."

Although Lopez admits he never envisioned this jet-setting, whirlwind lifestyle when he dabbled in music as a kid, he thrives on his work.

When Lopez has spare time, he spends it cooking up side projects and working on new shows for El Vez, like the gospel revival show this fall, which will incorporate religious themes from around the world.

In addition to touring, this actor, director, choreographer, poet and musician is working with an Austrian film company to produce a feature film starring El Vez and is collaborating with another musician to launch another band this fall.

"I've got tons of pokers and lots of fires," he said.

But El Vez fans need not despair. Lopez predicts El Vez will be alive for many years to come.

"I can see myself as an old man doing the show," he said. "Maybe it will turn into a lounge act or that kind of thing."

Sun and stars shine for the AT&T Pebble Beach golf week

MONTEREY PENINSULA people often smile and make weather jokes when they mention the annual AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am golf tournament. Some of them shake their heads and say, "Yes, we can always count on it to bring us lots of rain," or "It wouldn't be the AT&T unless it rained."

Last year, of course, the pro-amateur tournament play was canceled after two rounds to unplayable conditions. This year's tournament officials were hard-pressed to let golfers on the courses until they were really sure the fairways and greens were ready.

Social Spotlight

By Dodie Barkley

At the AT&T, people always feel they're in a fantasy land of sorts. Walking on the emerald green grass that surrounds the 18th hole as it juts out into the bay in front of The Lodge at Pebble Beach with the golden sunlight, just makes you feel good somehow. But this year, AT&T Week started on the Peter Hay par-three course.

Last Wednesday, the 3M Celebrity Challenge was played at Peter Hay, while practice rounds took place at the Spanish Bay course, where the sun came out in all its glory. It was clear skies and terrific fun for golfers and spectators alike.

Among the celebrities playing for their favorite charities were Jack Lemmon, Bill Murray, Glen Campbell, James Woods, Clint Eastwood, Joe Pesci, *Huey Lewis, Vince Gill, Bryant Gumbel and John Denver.

At one point, barbs from Murray resulted in cigar-smoking actor Joe Pesci kicking Murray's golf ball off the tee, bringing laughter from the gallery. Murray was sedately dressed in slacks and shirt this year. Last year he wore blue overalls. This year, he sported a cap inscribed "The Monterey County Fire Department."

The Celebrity Challenge lasted a little more than an hour, and it was great fun. Tournament play continued Thursday through Sunday on the Spyglass Hill, Poppy Hills and Pebble Beach courses.

It looked like there were more women, excitedly pushing programs toward the stars for autographs, and they weren't just young girls. I spied one matron about to kiss Pesci. Darn it! I wish she had asked me to do it. I could have claimed some sort of Fourth Estate privilege as they threw me off the course. Maybe next year. Pesci is one smooth golfer and a cutie pie!

During Sunday's final day, guests and officials met in the upstairs Pebble Beach Lodge dining room, overlooking the 18th green. They were invited to brunch by the Pebble Beach Co.

On hand to greet guests was John Chadwell, president and chief operating officer for the Pebble Beach Co. Among those attending were Hubert and Chantal Keller of Fleur de Lis Restaurant in San Francisco, Mark Stillwell, Paul Woudenberg, Supervisor Edith Johnsen, Lei Fernandez, Pacific Grove Mayor Sandy Koffman, Mark Verbonich, Sam and Pat Garrett, and Carmel Mayor Ken White. Who won the tournament? Why Mark O'Meara, of course. For the fifth time in his career!

■ Alliance on Aging launches fourth annual Palette Painting Auction

The rain came down in sheets Friday, Jan. 24. But that didn't stop the loyal supporters of The Alliance on Aging. They bid on 24 exquisite palettes donated by leading artists. The action took place at the Trailside Americana Fine Art Gallery in Carmel.

The Alliance realized more than $6,500 from the auction.

Many of the artists were world-renowned and several were local. A number of Bill Bates' famous cartoons were on exhibit. One image that struck me especially depicted an historic Methodist Church built in 1849 in Coloma. It was expertly done by Martin Weekly.

Delicious hors d'oeuvres and wines were served to the brave, cold and wet people who attended, including Jane and John Roland, Steve Grant, Cindy Joerger, Scott Bray, Morley Brown, Oleg Kovalenko and others.

Sponsors of the event were The Trailside Americana Gallery, KSBW TV-8, Magic 63AM and The Carmel Pine Cone.

One hundred percent of the proceeds from the sale of the palettes goes directly to support the programs of the Alliance on Aging. Its mission is to provide services that meet the social, physical and emotional needs of seniors. The Alliance needs many volunteers. Call 655-1334.

■ Monterey NAACP branch celebrates an anniversary

The Embassy Suites Hotel in Seaside hosted the Monterey Peninsula Branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) and its 25th anniversary of Life Membership and Presentation of Awards Banquet last Saturday.

Master of Ceremonies Fred Anderson of Hartnell College introduced several community leaders. Among them were Monterey Branch NAACP President Joe Watson, Seaside Mayor Don Jordan, Banquet Chairman Ruthie Watts and a host of others including 4th District Supervisor Edith Johnsen and U.S. Congressman Sam Farr.

This year's keynote speaker was Danny J. Bakewell, Sr., a Pasadena civic leader, activist, philanthropist and businessman. A strong advocate for affirmative action, he decried the lack of positive leadership needed to address affirmative action issues and, also, drug related problems.

"We have no control," he said, "and yet we are capable of doing a lot!"

He spoke of the fears that communities must deal with, saying that because residents are so frightened of the drug dealers who live there, they just go home and lock their doors.

"We need to do something. We should organize block watchers. We need to see a vision for the future of our children. We are tired of seeing our young men go to prison on frivolous charges," Bakewell said.

Bakewell spoke against the Three Strikes law.

"It's wrong! No one should go to prison for stealing a candy bar at a 7-Eleven store." Bakewell ended his speech with a plea for everyone to get involved, saying, "And don't let anyone else do things for you. You are capable, you've got to be strong!"

Farr then spoke of the good work accomplished by the local NAACP and its volunteers.

NAACP past president Jackie Craghead made several presentations to 1996 Subscribing Life Members, followed by a Life Member presentation by First Vice President Ruthie Watts.

Highlight of the banquet was the Community Service Award presented by NAACP Youth Council President Tiffany Johnson to Darryl Faust, Sr. and William McKnight. The two were honored for dedicated volunteer service on the NAACP Youth Council.

It's always a joy to see and hear of the goals being met by the Monterey Chapter of the NAACP. I hope they invite me next year.

■ PG PRIDE wows 'em again

How do you thank a handful of beautiful people like these? The PG PRIDE (Public Response in Dollars for Education) folks held their annual Great Taste of PG gala Sunday at The Inn at Spanish Bay. And it was a lollapalooza, a magnificent repast of wines and delectable gourmet foods, together with an interesting selection of auction items, as usual.

Chairman Jane Durant Jones, Bill McElyea, Mickey Wilson, Cheryl Glass, Linda Pagnella and Jan Covell and others run the entire event, and Jones told me that they all pay $35 for their tickets just like everyone else. Why? Well, that is what PG PRIDE is all about. Its supporters want to make as much money as possible to directly benefit the students of Pacific Grove schools. The organization made almost $20,000 last year.

"Do you take all the profits and just give them to the PG Unified School District?" I asked.

"Good gracious, no," answered Pagnella, with a sweet smile. "We go directly into the classrooms and give them the help they need. Teachers make lists of supplies they need, submit them to us, and we try to cover the costs for them. It's as simple as that."

Artist Martin Weekly, chair Cindy Joerger, Ron Weitzman and Don Craghead pose in front of Weekly's palette painting of a Methodist church in Coloma. The event was the Alliance on Aging art auction at Trailside Americana Gallery in Carmel.

Mickey Wilson, Cheryl Glass, Linda Pagnella and Jan Covell were among the committee members who assured a successful PG PRIDE benefit gala Sunday at the Inn at Spanish Bay.

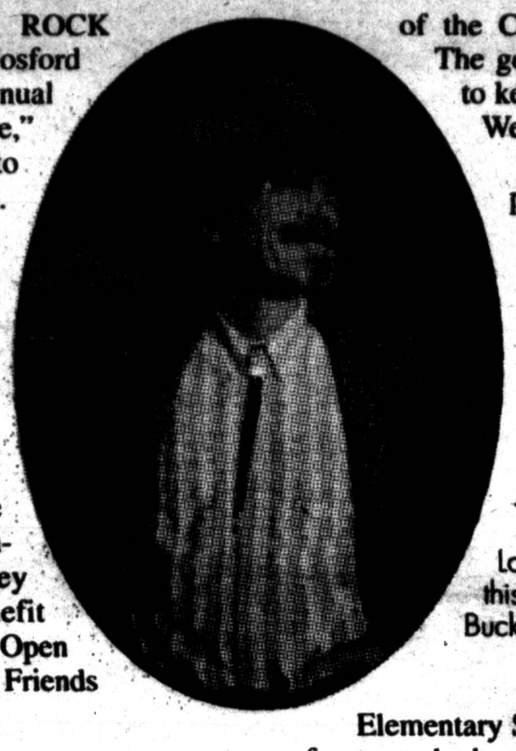
Evening of music, dance benefits Carmel Valley Library

COUNTRY AND ROCK recording artist Larry Hosford headlines the third annual "Evening at the Buckeye," coming Saturday to Carmel Valley Village. Nickel and a Nail Band will also supply music, and the fun continues with a buffet, no-host bar and dancing.

Setting is the library, located at 65 W. Carmel Valley Road, which is the site of the former Buckeye restaurant in Carmel Valley Village. Proceeds benefit the "Keep The Door Open Fund" sponsored by the Friends of the Carmel Valley Library. The goal is to raise $10,000 to keep the library open on Wednesdays.



Larry Hosford headlines this year's 'Evening at the Buckeye.'

The benefit is set 7 p.m. to midnight. A $15 donation is requested. Attendees must be 21 or over.

In keeping with a Valentine's Day theme, students from Tularcitos Elementary School are making frames to be hung in the library for attendees to inscribe valentine messages.

This year there is to be a special drawing for baskets containing such items as a gift certificate for a romantic stay at the Tickle Pink Inn, Carmel; elegant gifts from Linens & Such, Carmel; selections of Ghirardelli Chocolates, scented products from Rainbow Scents, The Barnyard, Carmel and gourmet coffee and chocolates donated by Holman Ranch.

Additional information is available on the net at www.such.com/Library.

Fuad Bahou's latest originals called 'contemporary, colorful'

A NEW COLLECTION of original art titled "Visual Voices," is the creation of local artist Fuad Bahou. An exhibition of Bahou's works opens Friday at the Marjorie Evans Gallery in Sunset Center, San Carlos at Ninth, Carmel. A reception for the artist is set 5 to 7 p.m.

Contemporary, colorful and thought-provoking, "Visual Voices" will include painted furnishings and bottles as well as recent works on paper.

Bahou and his partner, Debby Corlew, arrived in Carmel 13 years ago. They own Cafe Stravaganza in Carmel and California Bagel in Monterey. His art fills their businesses.

"I work with whatever happens," explains Bahou. "If an image becomes soft and hazy, I might draw into it, or highlight its boundaries to emphasize the new look. I'm creating problems to solve, and each solution gives me new ideas about my next piece. Each work stands alone, and arrives at its conclusion independently — there's no set formula."

'Response to Siren Wail' is a 1997 acrylic and oil pastel on paper work by Fuad Bahou.

The artist came to America from Jerusalem 40 years ago. After receiving his M.F.A. from UCLA in 1966, Bahou was awarded a National Endowment for the Arts Travel Award.

This exhibit can be viewed through Feb. 28. To learn more, call 624-3996.
